ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of generating personalized television programming content. The method involves developing a user profile and employing a filtering process to isolate relevant content to be presented. The filtering process involves the removal of content that does not fit the customization profiles of any of the system users usage patterns. The method further involves marking content suitable for a particular user and presenting the marked content to the user.